

Panel 1: The First Contact

Astronaut Nova cautiously approaches a jagged Martian rock formation with a scanning device, prepared to confront an unknown cosmic entity.

Caption: The desolate Martian wind whines through the red spires, carrying the high-pitched beep of a cosmic metal detector.

Nova gripped the scanner, sweating beneath the visor. 'Alright, alien overlord. Show yourself. I took three semesters of xenobiology and I am not afraid to use my words!'

Panel 2: Universal Instincts

Nova freezes in bewilderment as the mysterious alien turns out to be a chubby three-eyed purple cat casually batting an expensive rover antenna off a boulder.

Caption: TINK! The sound of a billion-dollar piece of government hardware meeting its gravity-assisted doom.

Nova's jaw dropped. 'Great. Millions of miles from Earth, and gravity's ultimate purpose is still helping a chubby purple dust-bunny knock my stuff off the table.'